

The Bachelor Degree program from the Law School keeps the tradition of the Romanian legal education but it also interprets the complexity of professional activity in terms of social and economic change, which are reflected in the current legal regulations or legal regulations in progress.

This is why the structure of activities within the School has been adjusted to the newest requirements of educational modernization and they rely upon the specific features of the legal field. Considering the research of the labor market and the analysis of the features of domestic and international legal education, the curricula, the content of the subjects, and the training methods have undergone significant changes in order to provide the young students with real perspectives of developing a career in this field.

The Centers of Excellence, the extracurricular courses which are organized every year and in which well-known specialists in the field or foreign professors participate, the students' debating societies and conferences or the scholarships by means of the Erasmus program are only few of the facilities that the students of the Law School can benefit from while they are still studying. They help them acquire the necessary abilities and skills which are essential in their jobs according to their own expectations.

As a direct way of enhancing their theoretical knowledge from courses and seminars, the Law School has developed a strong practice base, which includes legal institutions in Bucharest and in our country, but also an internal system of relevant pragmatic information dissemination by creating specialized scientific debating circles.

By means of the knowledge acquired during bachelor studies, the future alumni will directly participate in the act of justice, in the reform imposed by Romania's accession to the European Community. The involvement in extracurricular professional activities of many professors from the Law School, that is by engaging in institutions such as court houses, law courts, prosecutors' offices, law firms, notary offices, ministries and other public institutions can be noticed in the pragmatic dimensions of the educational process. Students benefit from up-to-date courses and a real database which can be accessed by appealing to the professional experience of the professors at the Romanian-American University.
